How long do we keep personal information?

Dyfed-Powys Police and Crime Commissioner keeps your personal information for as long as is necessary for the particular purpose or purposes for which it is held.

Records that contain your personal information processed for “general data” purposes will be managed in accordance with the Dyfed-Powys Police and Crime Commissioner Retention and Disposal Policy.

What are your information rights?

An area of change in the new Data Protection Act relates to individuals’ rights, the law clarifies and extends rights which existed under the Data Protection Act 1998, as well as introducing some additional ones.

Your information rights will depend on the reasons why and how your information was collected and why it is being used.

Your information rights in relation to personal data, considered as “general data” are:

Right to be informed – This places an obligation upon Dyfed-Powys Police and Crime Commissioner to tell you how we obtain your personal information and describe how we will use, retain, store and who we may share it with.

Right of Access – This is commonly known as subject access and is the right which allows your access to your personal data and supplementary information, however it is subject to certain restrictions.

Right to Request Rectification – You are entitled to have personal data rectified if it is inaccurate or incomplete.

Right to Erasure – The right to erasure is also known as ‘the right to be forgotten’. This right enables you to request the deletion or removal of personal data where there is no compelling reason for its continued processing.

Right to Restrict Processing – Individuals have a right to ‘block’ or suppress processing of personal data. When processing is restricted, organisations are permitted to store the personal data, but not further process it.

Right to Data Portability – The right to data portability allows you, in some instances, to obtain and reuse your personal data for your own purposes across different services.
